

Ultraviolet Observations of Stellar Populations from Astronomical Satellites

Young-Wook Lee

Astronomy Program, Yonsei University

The UV observations from astronomical satellites are providing new informations on the ages of old stellar populations. In this paper, we discuss the recent developements in space UV observations, as well as their implications inferred from stellar population models.